The research working group included members from the Texas Department of State Health Services, Texas Association Against Sexual Assault, the Office of the Attorney General, and The Institute on Domestic Violence & Sexual Assault, The University of Texas at Austin.
Methodology
- Representative sample of 1,203 adult Texans
- Sample drawn randomly from landline (60%) and mobile phones (40%)
- Sampling error is +/- 2.8 percentage points at a 95% confidence level
- Weights include design effects for gender, ethnicity, and age
- Telephone interviewers collected data using closed ended questions with a specific survey protocol

Why are 2015 rates higher?
- Our science to accurately measure sexual assault over the last decade has evolved.
- We underestimated of sexual assault in Texas in 2003.
- An increase in public awareness in the past decade may mean that people think differently about their experiences with sexual assault.

Sexual assault survivors may be referred to as victims because this project is grounded in the criminal justice system. As researchers, our aim is to honor every person’s choice in language to describe themselves and to name their experiences.
Who are the Offenders?

April 2015

Lifetime Victimization Experiences*

* Percentages add to more than 100% because some victims have experienced multiple assaults over their lifetime.

Understanding the Offenders of Women

- Women are primarily sexually assaulted by men.
- 96% of women who have been assaulted report that their offenders were male.
- A significant minority of women report being victimized by a female offender (9%).
- Most women are victimized by someone related to them or in a very close relationship to them (61%). These relationships include spouses, dating partners, other members of their family, and other relatives.
- 52% of women report that a male acquaintance or friend was the offender.
- About a third of women (34%) report that the offender was a male stranger.

Understanding the Offenders of Men

- Men are as likely to be victimized by women as they are by men.
- 53% of men who have been assaulted report that their offenders were female and 55% report that their offenders were male.
- About 3 in 10 men report that someone in a very close relationship to them was their offender, including both males and females. These relationships include spouses, dating partners, other members of their family, and other relatives.
- Most men are victimized by an acquaintance or friend (60%), including both males and females.
- About 1 in 4 men report that their offender was a stranger, including both males and females.

Top Reasons Victims Did Not Report to Law Enforcement

- Victims had difficulty defining their experience as a crime.
- Victims were too young to report their victimization to law enforcement.
- Victims were too scared to report.
- Victims chose to deal with the sexual assault themselves or ask their friends or family for help.
- Victims felt “stupid”, ashamed or embarrassed about what had happened to them.

Other Reasons Victims Gave for Not Reporting to Law Enforcement

- Victims wanted to forget about it and move on with their lives.
- Victims did not think they would be believed.
- Victims were prevented from reporting it.
- Victims thought that reporting it might jeopardize their employment.
- Victims blamed themselves.
- Victims worried about jeopardizing their immigration status.
